Growing Mounds of Ger-

the Suburbs

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, Tuesday, Sept. 15 (AP)—The Russian lines before Stalingrad held firmly yesterday despite repeated Nazi lunges that left a growing mound of German dead on the western and northwestern outskirts of that imperiled Volga river city, a communique said early today.

A Red army withdrawal in the central Caucasus at Mordok was announced, however. On the front, less than sixty miles from the Grozny oil fields, the Russians fell back to new defense positions after German tanks crossed a river, presumably the Terek.

Southwest of Stalingrad the Russians sent Red cavalry against two German infantry attacks, "wiping out about 500 enemy officers and men," in a successful repulse, the communique said.

Nazi Attacks Repulsed

The steady Nazi attacks west of the city also were repulsed, the Russians said, citing one instance where Soviet artillery and "tank busters" destroyed nine German tanks and about three infantry companies when two regiments supported by forty tanks crashed against the Soviet positions.

In beating off five fierce Hungarian attacks south of Voronezh on the Upper Don, the Russians said 2,000 Hungarians were killed, twenty tanks destroyed, and prisoners taken. The Germans and Hungarians for months now have tried to crash through the Red positions at Voronezh to protect the left flank of their long salient, which reaches southeastward to Stalingrad.

On the Volkhov river in the Leningrad area the Russians said the enemy was dislodged from a populated place near Sinyavino and that 500 Germans were killed and five

Allied Air Units Attack Japs in New Guinea Area

Bomb Positions in the Owen Stanley Mountains; Patrols Active

GEN. MACARTHUR'S HEAD-
QUARTERS, Australia, Tuesday, Sept. 15 (AP)—Allied air units continued yesterday to strafe Japanese positions in the Owen Stanley mountains of New Guinea and patrol activity increased, but the general situation remained unchanged for the fifth day, the Allied noon communique said.

The advance Japanese columns still were being held in check in the rugged mountains about forty miles from Port Moresby, main Allied base in New Guinea, toward which their jungle-trained troops are driving.

There was a lull in the smashing bombing attacks, which the Allies had been delivering on Japanese bases on the southeast coast of New Guinea. Today's communique mentioned no bombing except an attack on two enemy cargo ships at Saumlaki, in the Tenimber Islands north of Darwin, Australia.

This action was carried out by medium bombers, which attacked both with bombs and machinegun fire, but the results were not observed. Two other Japanese cargo vessels were attacked in this area the previous day and one of them left sinking.

Helsinki Raided

BERLIN (From German Broadcasts), Sept. 14 (AP)—The Finnish capital of Helsinki underwent its 20th air raid alarm today when Soviet planes tried to penetrate the city's defenses, the Berlin radio said tonight. No bombs were dropped, the dispatch said.

Republicans Apparently Assured Of Victory in Maine Elections

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 14 (AP)—Republicans rolled up one-sided victories tonight in three of the four contests in the nation's first election since it went to war, and apparently were assured of a clean sweep of the down-east state.

United States Senator Wallace H. White, Jr., and Governor Sumner Sewall, Republicans, were returned to office by better than two-to-one majorities, and U. S. Rep. Margaret C. Smith held a virtually insurmountable margin over her Democratic opponent, with only a handful of precincts still uncounted.

The sharpest contest centered in the First Congressional district, where Robert Hale (R), a critic of the president's domestic policies, held a lead over former Democratic Governor Louis J. Brann, administration supporters. With several Democratic strongpoints still uncounted, the tabulation in 106 of 151 precincts gave Hale 22,615 to 13,106 for Brann.

Russians, British Bombard Bremen In Great Raids

Hundreds of RAF Planes Attack Important German Cities

Heavy Damage Reported To Have Been Inflicted over Wide Area

By RUSSELL C. LANDSTROM

LONDON, Sept. 14 (AP)—The two-front air war against Germany and her junior partners achieved its broadest scope thus far when hundreds of RAF bombers assaulted Bremen and other targets in northwestern Germany last night and Russian bombers fanned wide over eastern Germany, Rumania and Bulgaria.

The Russians specified only the Rumanian oil-producing center, Ploesti, the Ruman capital, Bucharest, and Koenigsberg, East Prussia, as their targets, but Axis reports credited even a broader sweep to the Red air force.

The Russians said they left Ploesti installations and Bucharest in flames.

100th Raid on Bremen

The British raid on Bremen, Germany's second largest port and an important U-boat hatchery, was compared in unofficial comment to last Thursday's assault by several hundred bombers in Dusseldorf. It was the RAF's 100th call on the big maritime center up the Weser from the North Sea.

The official report indicated the weight of the attack on Bremen and northwestern Germany by describing the attackers as "a very strong force" and acknowledging loss of nineteen bombers.

RAF fighter planes joined the general offensive from the west with "intruder patrols" over northern France—maneuvering over German air fields to catch enemy planes in take-offs or landings.

A thumping final to the RAF's night operations was provided by bombers which streaked singly across northwestern Germany at sunrise to smash at German factories, transport and personnel.

His "X" Card Gets Him Prison Term

BALTIMORE, Sept. 14 (AP)—Martin Sidney Meyers, 24-year-old former government employee and war plant worker, today pleaded guilty to a charge of fraudulently obtaining an unlimited "X" gasoline ration card in the first gas rationing period and was sentenced by Judge William C. Coleman in United States court to four months in prison.

Testimony before Judge Coleman showed that Meyers had rented an apartment in the home of Rev. John F. Watts at White Marsh and that the clergyman had died sixteen days before Meyers made application for the "X" card in Rev. Watts' name.

Anti-Inflation Bills Presented In Both Houses

Divergent Measures May Require Many Days of Debates

Farm Bloc Members Likely To Fight for Their Demands

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP)—Divergent measures for dealing with inflation, which may require extensive efforts to reconcile for final enactment, were introduced in the senate and House today in the face of the Oct. 1 deadline set by President Roosevelt.

The Senate bill was a board resolution authorizing and directing the president to stabilize prices, wages and salaries and other factors in the cost of living at the levels of Aug. 15 "so far as practicable" but stipulating that farm prices should not be fixed below parity or the highest market price between Jan. 1 and Sept. 15, which ever was higher.

The House bill, on which Farm Bloc members of both branches were consulted, would authorize and direct the president to stabilize "maximum salaries and industrial wages" so as to "maintain a fair and equitable relation" between them and crop prices and would authorize (but not direct) the setting of price ceilings on crops at parity or the highest price so far commanded in 1942, whichever was higher.

House Bill Provisions

The House bill also would put a floor under farm prices at parity from the present time until three years after the war by requiring the secretary of agriculture to make crop loans and purchases for this purpose. This floor, a feature not in the Senate bill, would apply to non-basic commodities on which production was encouraged for war

Meat Rationing By End of Year Promised in Md.

Exact Starting Date Uncertain, Director
Joseph Says

BALTIMORE, Sept. 14 (AP)—Regional OPA Administrator Sylvan L. Joseph, of New York, today promised Marylanders meat rationing by the end of this year.

He said the exact starting date for the rationing had not yet been definitely decided.

Joseph added, however, "two, three and possibly four" new items will be added to the rationing list by the end of the year, but did not indicate what the new products were.

Speaking at a meeting of chairmen and representatives of all local Maryland rationing boards, Joseph said the price control program will be in full effect by the end of December.

Rationing Major Job

Governor O'Connor praised the patriotism of the members of the local boards who, he said, began what they thought last January was going to be a minor job. It has become, however, the Governor added, a major assignment.

The boards were formed and have operated without "any prejudice whatsoever," O'Connor asserted, and are performing an important task in assisting those on the home front toward their goal of victory.

Joseph said that as the policy of the OPA was to emphasize local initiative in the rationing program, the price control program will be decided upon locally and regionally.

Price ceilings, he added, would have to be decided upon within communities according to special problems existing there. Responsibility of the local boards, the administrator added, will thus be greatly increased shortly.

Would Change Name

He said there was a great deal of merit in a suggestion to change the organization's name from its present one to "The War Equalization Board."

Ration boards, he added, "are not trying to take away meat from anyone but trying to see that all get an equal amount."

British Troops Make Commando Raid on Tobruk

Inflict Casualties and Cause Some Damage to Axis Port

LONDON, Tuesday, Sept. 15 (AP)—A small contingent of British troops, supported by light naval forces and heavy RAF attacks, landed at the Axis-held Libyan port of Tobruk Sunday night "and inflicted casualties and damage on the enemy before withdrawing," the admiralty announced today.

"Our force landed in the face of strong opposition," the communique added. "The withdrawal was not carried out without losses, which in view of the strength of the defenses, were to be expected."

Other British light naval forces successfully bombarded enemy lines of communications "at El Daba in Egypt, and emerged with neither damage nor casualties, the British said.

The British did not give the extent of their losses in the raid on Tobruk, which is seventy-five miles west of the Egyptian frontier. An earlier Rome radio broadcast said two British warships were hit by Axis shell fire and that one of the vessels later sank.

The Italians said a violent bombardment by a large number of RAF planes preceded the landing, and that "immediate intervention of Italian-German defenses frustrated the attempt."

British paratroopers, Rome said, also participated in the raid which was supported by six naval units, made up of cruisers and destroyers.

Tobruk, an important supply port for Field Marshal Rommel's Axis army in Egypt, has been in Axis hands since June 22. It has been attacked by RAF and United States planes repeatedly.

FBI PROBING MYSTERY BLAST UNDER IOWA PASSENGER TRAIN

CRESTON, Ia., Sept. 14 (AP)—FBI agents, railroad detectives and other law enforcement officers tonight blocked off the areas approximately three miles east of Nodaway, Ia., where early today a series of twelve explosions rocked the Burlington Railroad's westbound Zephyr streamline train.

James L. Dalton, head of the FBI in Iowa, whose office is investigating the explosions, has not disclosed their cause.

The blasts, which caused at least one passenger, J. H. Sheridan of Omaha, to believe the train "had been hit by lightning," caused no injury to the 187 passengers, railroad officials said. No cars left the track.

Nine Cars Damaged

Damage to nine of twelve cars on the sleek train was estimated at $5,000 by railroad officials after a preliminary investigation.

When the blasts went off the train's air brakes were damaged, causing them to lock. The train slid 3,600 feet to a stop, flattening the wheels on several of the cars. The power units of the Zephyr, comprising two cars, escaped the explosions, but all but three of the remaining twelve cars were damaged on the underside.

The damage included burst water

FIVE SHIPS REPORTED SUNK OFF EAST COAST OF CANADA

(By The Associated Press)

Increased German submarine activity off Canada was acknowledged by the Canadian navy yesterday with the grave announcement that four United Nations merchant ships and a Canadian escort vessel were sunk in an attack by German U-boats on a convoy.

At the same time a fifth ship, a Panamanian merchant vessel, was announced by the United States navy as sunk in the Atlantic off South America late last month. The sinkings brought the Associated Press total of United Nations and neutral vessels announced sunk in the Western Atlantic since Pearl Harbor to 469.

The German radio, meanwhile, broadcast a special communique claiming that U-boats sank nineteen ships totalling 122,000 tons, two destroyers and one Corvette off of an Allied convoy in the North Atlantic.

Details Uncertain

It was uncertain whether the Germans and Canadians were announcing the same battle, but the Germans said the engagement began Sept. 9 when German U-boats met in mid-Atlantic a strongly protected convoy coming from England. The fight continued, uninterrupted and violent, until Sept. 14 when "only scattered remnants of the convoy were able to continue the journey," the Germans said, adding that six more ships were seriously damaged by torpedoes.

The Canadian account, giving scant details, said ten of the officers

Roosevelt Calls Britain Base for United Nations But President Says Lend- Lease Supplies Are Shared with Russia

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP)—President Roosevelt disclosed today that Britain now is regarded as "an offensive base" for the fighting men of the United Nations, but is sharing equally with Russia in American lend-lease weapons flowing across the seas to the European war theater.

Mr. Roosevelt sent Congress his sixth quarterly report on lend-lease operations and, breaking down export figures for the first time in a year, showed that about thirty-five per cent of the weapons and war supplies are going to Russia, thirty-five per cent to the United Kingdom, and thirty per cent to all other regions.

Production Lags

Total lend-lease assistance through August was $6,489,000,000, the report said. Yet the President declared that so far the United States "has little more than passed the halfway mark towards maximum possible war production."

He emphasized that this production still must expand.

"Not until we have reached the maximum—and we can do this only by stripping our civilian economy to the bone—can our fighting men and those of our Allies," he said, "be assured of the vastly greater quantities of weapons required to turn the tide. Not until then can the United Nations march forward together to certain victory."

The total Lend-Lease aid figure included goods awaiting transfer to the recipient nations, those on docks and in warehouses ready for actual export, and such services as the repairing of ships and the training of airplane pilots.

$3,525,000,000 in August

The value of exports alone through August was $3,525,000,000, with only thirty per cent of this going to the middle east, Australia, China, and other areas. The report commented on the fact that help for China had been limited by transportation difficulties, but said that "the development of the railroads is making heavy traffic, escaped damage."

Dense Oregon Woods Set Afire When Mysterious Plane Comes in from Sea and Immediately Returns; Submarine Sighted Off Coast; Western Defense Officers Launch Investigation

BROOKINGS, Ore., Sept. 14 (AP)—Eyewitnesses told tonight of the incendiary attack of an unidentified seaplane, presumably Japanese, that winged in from the sea last Wednesday.

Residents of this town at the mouth of the Chetco river heard the plane circling in the mist at dawn, and a few caught glimpses of the ship.

Mrs. W. C. Crissey described it as a small plane without distinguishing marks. She said it circled over the beach at 500 feet, its pontoons clearly discernible. Then it headed inland.

Asa Carpenter, operator of a sawmill several miles up the Winchurk river, said he heard the plane circling around Mt. Emily shortly after 6 a. m.

Harold "Razz" Gardner, forest service lookout in Mt. Emily, saw the plane circling and later fire broke out. He brought the flames under control.

STUMP SET AFIRE

He reported to H. R. Dewart, Curry county air raid chairman, that he found fragments and a sizeable crater. The bomb sheared a six-inch tree and set fire to a stump, he said.

Ed Marshall, federal forester, dug out of the crater what he said was the nose of an incendiary bomb. Attached was a steel shank bearing Japanese characters.

Nearly were approximately fifty square pellets, each with a hole in the center. They were of a spongy substance. Where they fell the earth was fused into slag, Marshall added.

This area is well known to Japanese.

Japs Know Section

Japanese exported extensively from the Chetco river country. Exporters often had their own men buying logs and arranging for rafting them downriver. They had plenty of opportunity for mapping the region. The countryside is heavily timbered, mountainous and sparsely settled. No highways extend into the interior and there are few trails.

Sighted Small Plane

Tom Page said he heard an aircraft "engine and rushed out to see a small seaplane with a single pontoon break through a heavy fog bank and come in over Brookings very low."

"The plane continued inland, but it was impossible to follow its course because of clouds banked against the mountains," Page said. "From the sound of the engine, it apparently made a circle over the mountains in the area where the bomb fragments were discovered and headed back out to sea."

"The plane came back directly over Brookings, still flying low." He estimated that the time from the first sound of the plane coming

Chemical Nitrogen Fertilizer Banned

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP)—The use of chemical nitrogen fertilizer for the nation's lawns, flower gardens and golf courses was banned by the War Production Board today, effective immediately, and its use for agriculture was restricted to the minimum formula deemed necessary for basic food requirements.

The aim is to conserve nitrogen for necessary foods and for explosives, especially smokeless powder.

Coming under the complete ban are yards, cemeteries, golf courses, non-commercial plants of flowers, shrubs and trees. Commercial florists and nurseries may use it for propagation of trees, shrubs and flowers and for commercial cut flower sale, on their own establishments, but not on the premises of customers.

Truman Blamed
Truman blamed "perfectionists" in both the army and the navy for the delay in producing better fighting planes as well as ships and landing boats.

"Something had to be done to shake up the brass hats and get action, and obtain the best planes obtainable, even if we have to go to some other country to get them," Truman said, in explaining why his committee approved his bringing the matter up for debate.

Senator Lucas (D-Ill.) said he found it difficult to understand "why they send boys out in a plane which can fly only 120 miles an hour to fight against better planes."

Wallgren, a member of a Senate military affairs subcommittee which recently investigated Alaskan defenses, said a plane of that

"Swastika Band" On 3 Publishers, Rep. Holland Says

Congressman Renews Attacks on Three Large Newspapers

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14 (AP)—Rep. Holland (D-Pa.) renewed his criticism of the Chicago Tribune, Washington Times Herald and New York Daily News today with a charge that their publishers are marked with the "swastika brand" and would like, if they could, to destroy the immunity from lawsuit which congressmen enjoy for remarks made on the floor.

The publications, he said, "have found cause to fear the voice of one lone Congressman" who "can strip the Star-Spangled governing off three mighty publishers and leave them cowering in their ugly nakedness, marked with the swastika brand which they have made their emblem."

Call Holland a Liar

"All they can do is call me a liar," he said, "and then battle the bones of their ancestors. And they say they are just acting to sue me." If Joseph M. Patterson, publisher of the New York Daily News, wants a suit, Holland said, he already has one in Philadelphia, but his paper has "twisted and wiggled" in an effort to delay trial.

The suit, Holland declared, was filed by John O'Donnell, chief of the Washington Bureau of The Daily News, against The Philadelphia Record as a result of an editorial criticizing O'Donnell.

O'Donnell's charges. Holland accused O'Donnell of writing "phony news stories out of which Joe Patterson then concocts his essays in sedition which grace the editorial pages of The New York Daily News and The Washington Times-Herald."

Should the Philadelphia suit go to trial, he commented, Patterson "will then be forced to admit or disprove the fact that his Washington representative, his eyes and ears in the nation's capital, his personal friend and adviser in statecraft, is a Nazi sympathizer, open and unabashed."

in until it faded out on the return to sea was about twenty minutes.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 14 (AP)—Evidence that a Japanese submarine possibly operating from a submarine, may have attempted to set southern Oregon forests afire in the first air bombing of Continental United States was reported by the Western Defense Command today.

A communiqué issued by Lieutenant General John L. DeWitt, western defense commander, said that:

A small seaplane was observed over the area of Mount Emily nine miles northeast of Brookings, Ore., September 9.

A submarine was later sighted and bombed about thirty miles off the same shore by an army patrol plane, with unobserved results.

Jap Markings Found

A forest fire was started near Mount Emily and that markings on what appeared to be fragments of an incendiary bomb.

Forest patrols, which extinguished the blaze, discovered a foot-deep crater, the communiqué added, and about forty pounds of metal fragments and small pellets.

The fragments bore Japanese ideographs.

Apparently the Japanese, if they made the attack, selected one of the most heavily wooded sections of the coast, frequently threatened by forest fires.

A few years ago a fire in the same general area swept out of control and virtually wiped out the Oregon coast town of Bandon.

Japanese submarines have twice shelled the Pacific coast—at Goleta in Southern California February 23 and near Seaside, Ore., June 22, but this was the first reported attack from the air.

The Goleta shelling caused slight damage to oil well installations. The seaside shells buried harmlessly in a beach.

"The Western Defense Command is investigating the circumstances surrounding the discovery on September 9 of fragments of what appears to have been an incendiary bomb. These fragments were found by personnel of the United States forestry service near Mount Emily nine miles northeast of Brookings, Ore. Markings of the bomb fragments indicated that the missile was of Japanese origin."

O'Donnell's Charges

Holland accused O'Donnell of writing "phony news stories out of which Joe Patterson then concocts his essays in sedition which grace the editorial pages of The New York Daily News and The Washington Times-Herald."

Should the Philadelphia suit go to trial, he commented, Patterson "will then be forced to admit or disprove the fact that his Washington representative, his eyes and ears in the nation's capital, his personal friend and adviser in statecraft, is a Nazi sympathizer, open and unabashed."

Mysterious Plane Seen

"At about six a. m. Pacific war time, September 9, a small unidentified seaplane was observed coming inland from the sea and a half an hour later a plane was heard at the same point headed towards the sea. Due to poor visibility, the plane was not seen on its westward trip."

At 6:24 a. m. Mr. Howard Gardner, a forestry service observer on Mount Emily reported seeing an unidentified seaplane come from the west, circle, and return towards the sea. He described the plane as a single-motored biplane with a single float and small floats on the wings. The plane appeared to be small and of slow speed. It had no lights, no distinct color and no insignia was visible. It is possible that a plane of this type might have been carried on a submarine.

Submarine Bombed

"About 11 a. m. Pacific war time September 9 an army patrol plane reported sighting an unidentified submarine about thirty miles off shore in the same general vicinity. The submarine was bombed by the air plane with unobserved results."

"At about 12:20 p. m. Pacific war time, the same day, a small fire was observed about three miles south of Mount Emily. Investigation by forestry patrols who extinguished the fire disclosed a small crater about three feet in diameter and slightly more than a foot in depth. The earth appeared to be scorched. An examination of a crater and the area in the vicinity revealed about forty pounds of metal fragments and a number of small pellets. The fragments disclosed markings of Japanese ideographs which may have been part of a code indicating the arsenal where the bomb was manufactured. A search of the area has failed to reveal the presence of any other indications of bombs having been dropped."

type was sent out to bomb the Japanese at Kiska.

Wallgren said the United States had "the world beaten" with respect to bombers and interceptors, but discriminated against fighters.

American Fighters Weak

He said the American fighters had better armor protection but it made them less maneuverable.

"Our pilots are asking for a better plane," he declared. "The navy is using a plane today in Alaska which to my mind is a joke, not being able to do better than 120 miles an hour."

While he said the Americans had some "good planes," such as the P-39, P-40, the Mustang and the P-38, "none of them seem to measure up to the fastest planes which England is producing at the present moment."

Senator Norris (Ind-Neb.) said he saw no reason why "Great Britain should not be supplied with Spitfires in this country and no reason why our boys should not have them to fly."

Thuman declared WPB's "faulty distribution" of steel was "imperiling the whole war program" and declared WPB Chairman Donald M. Nelson should appoint "a two-flat-deck, competent man" to remedy material.

Meal Rationing

plaints of rationing and price control violations have been received by his office since the program went into effect. Complaints are coming in, he added, at the rate of fifty a week.

With a small staff of five to eight men, he said, only about fifteen cases were completed weekly after exhaustive investigation had been carried out.

Jacobs warned violators that starting this week his organization had begun to "crack down" on willful cases. Such cases, he added, would be prosecuted under the criminal code.

In some cases, however, he added, where shopkeepers had violated the price control law through ignorance or other non-malicious reasons, they had been allowed "to make a voluntary contribution to the United States treasury."

A great amount of educational work is necessary, he said, to make the public conscious of their duties, and the local ration boards are the ones to do it. He advised the board members not to wait for complaints to come in when they see a violation of the law but to ask the violator to rectify his mistake.

If that fails, Jacobs added, "send the complaints in to us and we'll investigate them."

Refers to Inflation

Acting Price Executive Philip R. Winebrenner asserted that inflation and the resultant deflation "is one of the most destructive elements of modern warfare after the killing and maiming, and piecemeal price control will not halt inflation."

Earlier, state OPA director Leo H. McCormick in a welcoming address announced that thirty-one chairmen and representatives of every local board in the state were present at the meeting.

Judge Emory H. Niles, Baltimore rationing administrator, explained the working of the Baltimore organizations.

State OPA Attorney Reuben Oppenheimer said "you gentlemen and all the men and women who serve with you, who are working day and night, neglecting what is left of your own businesses, are one of the vital parts of the war machine."

"We all know that the war cannot be won unless this fight against inflation can be won; that price-fixing and rationing are just as important on the home front as our armies and navies and airplanes are on the war front."

He praised the "absolute honesty and impartiality" of the boards which he said was the only reason that Americans would submit to the regulations.

The battle for Stalingrad had entered its twenty-first day.

(German high command communiqué yesterday and today pictured the Nazis as having entered the southern part of the city and having penetrated the northern outskirts and "occupied hills dominating the city" northwest of the central quarters of Stalingrad.)

The Germans were dangerously close to the high flat terrace on which Stalingrad proper stands. But the Red army's resolute stand was exacting perhaps the highest price which the Germans have paid for any single objective.

1,000 Killed Daily

Dispatches from the city, covering only a few of the many battles, have reported the slaughter of roughly 1,000 to 1,200 Germans daily. But as yet there has been no over-all estimate.

Today's mid-day communiqué reported only one German penetration of Russian positions on the Stalingrad front, and this only a temporary one.

"In one sector (southwest of Stalingrad) the enemy broke into the positions of our troops," said the noon bulletin of the Soviet information bureau. "A Soviet tank detachment attacked and destroyed the position. Five German tanks and eleven armored cars were destroyed."

Weldon said Bailey accused a young man as his accomplice in the killing last Monday near Tomah, Wis., of Miss Neil Pietrangeli, 30, and Miss Dorothy Baum, 32.

Previous to tonight's development, Weldon said, Bailey had insisted he had not raped the women, although the Milwaukee coroner informed Weldon both had been so attacked.

Bailey has varied his stories since his arrest last Saturday after transporting two 16-year-old girls from Sioux City, Ia., to Santa Maria.

Weldon said Bailey at first admitted killing the women, but contended a hitch-hiker soldier he met enroute from Cincinnati to Madison, Wis., raped them.

"I've never raped a woman in my life," Bailey had insisted in previous statements. Bailey said his accomplice escaped with him in 1940 from a Hattiesburg reformatory, Weldon reported.

Wisconsin authorities came here to return Bailey, who said he would waive extradition.

Bailey, a two-time deserter, calmly added to his lurid story by telling listeners he had killed two negroes in Mississippi several years ago.

Weldon asked if he was sorry for the slaying last Monday of the social workers.

"No," Weldon quoted him as replying.

stayed and a company of infantry was wiped out."

On the west of the city an assault by twenty German tanks and two infantry battalions was smashed by artillery and anti-tank fire, the communiqué said.

Stalingrad's refusal to yield to constant day and night bombings, especially effective due to the city's vulnerability on the table-like west bank of the Volga, was one of the most astonishing features of the defense.

Recent dispatches have failed to mention any Soviet fighter plane defense. The besieged city evidently was relying on anti-aircraft batteries and the simple rifles of Red infantrymen to cope with dive bombers.

This is an ominous development. It is being closely scanned by the United States officers in Moscow in the interest of getting a more Allied planes into the country.

Cooler weather was sweeping the whole southern Russian front, reminder of the time that is being gained by all the Red armies toward the immobilizing conditions of autumn and winter.

(Axis broadcasts disclosed that three generals had been appointed to establish a German winter line in Russia and to protect Axis troops against the terrors of the Russian cold.)

Nazis Plan New Drive

In the deep Caucasus, where the Germans were being held in the Terek valley area near Mordok for the twentieth consecutive day, there were indications that new Axis forces were being gathered for a final pre-winter push. Likewise on the Caucasian Black Sea coast the Germans now in possession of Novorossiysk were apparently feeling out Russian strength preliminary to an attempted push down the coastal highway toward the western oil port of Batum.

Near Gelendzhik, roughly thirty miles south of Novorossiysk, the Caucasian mountain chain extends to the sea and the shore highway cuts through passes which are good for defense. Some fourteen miles farther south lies Milhailovskoe Pass.

On the northern front east of Leningrad, in the Sinyavino sector on the railway, the Russians were reported in the noon communiqué to have broken strong German defenses, occupied a populated place and killed about 1,000 enemy troops.

Bailey Accuses Fellow Soldier In Double Murder

Alleged Slayer of Two Women in West Changes Story

SANTA MARIA, Calif., Sept. 14 (AP)—Revising previous confessions to the slaying of two women social workers, Robert T. Bailey, 20-year-old army deserter, admitted tonight, Deputy District Attorney Thomas Weldon said, that he and an accomplice raped their victims before shooting them.

Weldon said Bailey accused a young man as his accomplice in the killing last Monday near Tomah, Wis., of Miss Neil Pietrangeli, 30, and Miss Dorothy Baum, 32.

Previous to tonight's development, Weldon said, Bailey had insisted he had not raped the women, although the Milwaukee coroner informed Weldon both had been so attacked.

War Is for Keeps, Grew Declares in Appeal for Unity

Former Ambassador To Japan Says Japs Will Fight To Finish

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Sept. 14 (AP)—Former Ambassador Joseph C. Grew, asserting that "the ruthless will which is driving the Japanese nation toward conquest knows neither gentleness nor mercy," called upon America tonight to "stop groping" and to realize that this war "is the real thing," played for keeps.

"Today we face the greatest task in history," said Grew in addressing employees of the giant Remington Arms Company plant here at a dinner marking presentation of the army-navy "E."

"An easy transformation is not enough. Our effort must be an extraordinary one—one which exceeds anything that we have undertaken heretofore. This is war to the finish."

"The Japanese understand this—peasants as well as admirals and generals. They have gambled everything on their belief that we are too soft, too divided among ourselves, to stand before the fury of their attack—indeed a furious attack."

The ambassador, who represented the United States ten years in Japan, compared this nation at present to a football team playing against the scrubs and added that "the punch, the determined plunge that brings victory" was absent.

Fighting for Existence

"It is up to each one of us, to every American, to see the picture as a whole, to realize that we are fighting for our individual and national existence and for everything that each one of us holds dear, to gain from that realization inspiration, zeal, courage, and determination to harness all our energies into a tremendous effort, an epochal effort that will make our victory sure."

Grew declared that the men and women at the front could handle anything the Japanese can send against them "if each and every one of us—you and I—gives them his utmost support."

"This is our task—the task of our own great country and of our allies of the United Nations. Let us stop groping. It is a task in which you, employers and workers of America, have an immense part, a vital part to play. Play it well. If you fail—please mark my words—you pass into slavery and all America passes into slavery with you."

NEW YORK, Sept. 14 (AP)—A new wave of Axis terror and anti-Axis revolt were reported spreading through the Balkans tonight following redoubled efforts by Hitler to wring greater tribute for his war machine from occupied but still recalcitrant southeastern states.

The Germans themselves contributed to the accounts of trouble on their hands, reporting revolt in Bulgarian Macedonia and execution of 800 persons, described of course as "bandits," captured in Bosnia, mountainous western area of occupied Yugoslavia.

A state of siege was clamped on the district and city of Skopje, now a part of Bulgarian Macedonia and formerly a part of Yugoslavia, after the killing of many Bulgarian officials by Yugoslav patriots, said Balkan dispatches received in Switzerland. One account said these disorders were set off by efforts of Germans, Italians and Bulgarians to loot the district of its fall harvest.

One Sofia dispatch told of the appearance of mysterious planes over the Skopje area from which were dropped leaflets addressed to the population and ammunition for Macedonian insurgents.

At one stage of the outbreak, these same dispatches said, an attempt was made to assassinate Peter Grabovsky, Bulgarian interior minister. In two villages every last Bulgarian official was declared slain by Macedonian bands.

Macedonian circles in Sofia were quoted as saying anti-Bulgarian sentiment in Skopje was flaming high with one group of patriots demanding an autonomous Macedonian state and the other agitating for complete separation from Bulgaria.

The mass executions in Bosnia and the Berlin radio's announcement that "mopping-up operations there are progressing according to plan" were taken here to mean that the Germans were making a supreme effort to smash guerrilla resistance.

with heavy damage at Bremen, but the German high command, in typical fashion, reported only civilian casualties and damage to "homes, churches, hospitals and monuments."

The raid caught Bremen still in the process of cleaning up from the ninety-ninth attack on Sept. 4 when enormous destruction was wrought in submarine yards, a Pöck-Wulfe airplane factory, railways and industrial buildings.

As the night was moonless it was likely the RAF's new Pathfinder planes were utilized to illuminate the targets with their flares and lay out the pattern for the succeeding waves of planes with their own bombs.

Homeward bound bombardiers could see the red glow of their hanging for 100 miles, it was said.

Denies She's Candidate

BALTIMORE, Sept. 14 (AP)—Edith Johnson was more than mildly surprised today when she learned she is a Republican candidate for the house of delegates in the third district.

Her candidacy was filed August 8 by the Republican city committee, but Miss Johnson denied she is a candidate and has no such ambitions. But the official books say she is.

Marine Corps Sergeant Describes Destruction of 21 Japanese Planes

(The following account of action in the Solomon Islands was written by Sergt. James W. Hurlbut, a Marine Corps combat correspondent at the scene.)

GUADALCANAL, Solomon Islands, Aug. 24 (Delayed)—Marine Corps aviators fought the enemy today and bagged twenty-one Japanese planes that took part in a heavy daylight raid on Guadalcanal airport, recently built by and captured from the Japanese.

Army Air Corps pilots accounted for another enemy bomber.

Enemy losses included five twin-engine bombers, five single-engine bombers and eleven of the highly-touted Zeros. Two marine planes were lost and one is missing. Army planes returned intact.

In spite of their heavy losses, some of the enemy bombers managed to reach the field and dropped about a dozen bombs into the area. The only damage inflicted was the overturning of a truck which had been captured from the Japanese. Following the bombing, three planes flew low over the field and attempted to strafe the gun emplacements. A veritable hail of machine gun and anti-aircraft fire greeted them.

A squadron of marine planes flying several miles from Guadalcanal ran into the first group of enemy raiders heading toward the field.

Ex-Grid Star Leads Attack

Lieut. Robert E. MacLeod, former Dartmouth all-American football player whose home is Chicago, led the marine attack on the first group of nine enemy bombers.

"We dove on them from above," he said, "and it was just like shooting at sleeve targets. They were flying along about 9,000 feet when we hit them."

Lieut. J. H. King of Boston, is credited with the first hit on the first run.

"It was a twin-engine job, tagging along on the tail of the formation like a fat and happy goose,"

Lieut. King related. "My fire caught him amidships and he burst into fragments. As I pulled up, the protecting Zeros hit us and the sky was full of them for a few seconds. The going was heavy, so I ducked into a cloud."

Meanwhile, another group of bombers attempted to sneak into the field from another direction. Intercepted by the marines, they never reached their objective.

Nails Two Bombers

Lieut. Ken Frazier of Burlington, N. J., nailed two of these bombers.

Many Parents Have Constitutional Inadequacy, Mayo Physician Says

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
"The main trouble with many of the patients I see every day is that they are always weak and tired, and full of pain, and always getting sick in one way or another. Many have been operated on several times, and still aren't well."

So writes my friend, Dr. Alvarez, of the Mayo Clinic, about the group of people he says have constitutional inadequacy. He says they are getting a raw deal from the medical profession.

Over and over again they go to some medical institution to have a "thorough overhauling," and always a consultant finds some little defect that he views with alarm and has fixed, and the poor victim thinks he or she is going to get better, but never does.

Favorite diagnosis on such people just now are colitis, spastic colon, chronic appendicitis, mild endocrine, gland disorder, low blood calcium, vitamin deficiency, and low blood pressure.

The fact is that some people are put together in a way that makes them constitutionally inadequate to take the hard knocks and do the hard work of the world. Their muscles are thin and weak. Their digestion is under par. Their abdominal organs are dropped. The muscles of the bowels are weak.

Easily Infected
They take cold and get other infections easily. Physicians should recognize this more frequently. Dr. Alvarez thinks, and tell these people frankly they are never going to be "cured" in the sense that they will have blooming health. Their fundamental condition is ineradicable and they should adjust their lives to a lower level of energy expenditure.

In most cases the doctor should be able to recognize these patients on their appearance. Certainly after listening to their story they are chronically fatigued, they have had much disability, much treatment, they are underweight, the muscles are thin, they sag in some degree or other.

At other times it is not so evident—when the patient is a big, well-muscled man, or a straight fine-looking woman. But then the history makes things clear—frequent severe disabilities after every little infection, accident or emotional crisis. "Dad may look big and strong, but let him get a pimple on the nose and he'll be laid up for two weeks."

As to treatment Dr. Alvarez believes that they should be told frankly that no spectacular treatment is going to make a "husky" of such a person. There is a kind of prejudice against such frankness on the grounds that it discourages them. My experience, however, is that it really is a relief—and that they get what amounts to a cure by adjusting their lives to their body's capacity.

Darwin an Example

Many of them have done great work in the world—Darwin was a typical example. He could only work an hour or more a day, a trip to London would upset him for a week, yet he lived to be 73.

Certainly much of their trouble comes from emotional upsets and these the physician must help them to control—they get into fusts with street car conductors, clerks in stores, relatives. They waste their energy on foolish thinking, worrying, conscience searching, jealousies, flare-ups—all of which exhaust them physically.

Questions and Answers

Mrs. G.: Does spitting of blood come from any other cause than tuberculosis? This has happened twice within a month and a half. It does not come from my gums. I am 54 years old.

Answer: At the age of 54 blood in the sputum is not likely to be tuberculosis. At a young age, yes, but at 54 more likely to be ulceration around a tonsil, bronchitis or congestion of the lungs.

Mark's Wife

by MARIE BLIZARD
WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

BARBARA said desperately, as if she were explaining to the whole town, "Ruth, the cook at Storm-world is on her vacation. Why isn't it just nice and natural for me to ask him to come back here for supper tonight?"

"For the same reason that it is wrong for you to go to the golf club alone with him. Of course it's fun and it's nice and it's natural, but you can't take a full page ad in the Clarion and explain to Mrs. Grundy. Even if you could, you couldn't change what she thinks."

Barbara brushed cake crumbs into a neat little pile. She said, "What does Mrs. Grundy think?" as if she didn't know very well what Mrs. Grundy did think. She'd known it all along, but she pretended to herself that it couldn't be.

"Everybody knows that Claire Kilcran isn't much of a wife, but until they are divorced, Tom Kilcran, in the eyes of this town, is a married man."

"Of course," Barbara murmured. "And any man," Ruth went on, "married or single, who sees as much of a young, attractive widow as Kilcran sees of you, doesn't do it unless he is more interested than he should be."

Barbara's face flamed into pink. "I deny it!" she said angrily. "I know you do, but I'm afraid your denial isn't going to change public opinion."

The anger went out of Barbara's voice. "But, Ruth, darling, when a man's own daughter is part of it. When we're always a threesome or a foursome, how can they talk? They don't think Pamela would approve anything like that? Everybody here adores Pamela! They call her the Kilcran Princess."

"Leaving Pamela out of this, let me remind you that the point is to keep it a threesome or a foursome. It's when you go over that line, that you're running a risk."

"Ruth, people in this town are all my friends. They know me. They couldn't—"

"Yes, they know you. You're very popular, but, my dear, no woman's place is so secure among other women that she can run the risk of scandal. One little thing they can seize upon for proof, and the whole pack will tear you to pieces."

"And you think I'm headed for something like that?"

"Not exactly. No. You've got too much common sense and good judgment. When you see this the way it looks to other people, I expect you'll . . . well . . . you'll know what to do."

Barbara said, "Yes, I'll know what to do."

Ruth said, "If I thought that you and he were in love and that he were going to get a divorce—"

"Divorce?" the younger woman said sharply. She hadn't even imagined Tom free, or what it would mean to her. "I do not believe in divorce."

"That's what I thought," the nurse said calmly. "Well, our little talk seems to be over. I hope you'll forgive me."

"I'm grateful to you, Ruth." "We'd better get busy and set the table for three if he's coming in a few minutes. No reason to send the man away hungry. He can have supper with us—if you don't mind my company—and go on to his golf later."

Barbara said, "He won't mind, but I'd rather not . . ." she was going to say that she'd rather not see him again until she'd decided what she was going to do, but Ruth was looking at her with an expression of mild surprise, so she said lamely, "I'd rather not eat so early."

Ruth whisked a white cloth from the linen drawer and got out silver. "If you can stand any more advice, I'd suggest that you don't let Tom know you've talked this over. You know—" she polished a knife that needed no polishing—sometimes we make things seem true just by recognizing that other people think they are. If I were you, I'd fall back on that old one about a headache. . . . Want to eat on the porch?"

"The porch . . . Oh, yes, please. I'll tell him I have a headache. I can't imagine what his face would look like if I told him anything else."

She couldn't very well tell him that she couldn't be seen alone with him because people thought they were in love—and heaven alone knew what else—when he hadn't even held her hand, or even made love to her with words. Nothing of that kind had ever passed between them. There was nothing but an understanding that they enjoyed being together, doing the same things. These things didn't need labeling.

But there were other things that did need it, she thought, taking cups and saucers and plates from the china cabinet. She'd do it later when she was alone. It was time that she asked herself why she was shoving things out of her mind, putting truths into a room to be faced in a vague tomorrow. The tomorrow had come, and when she examined those things she had put away, she refused to accept the obvious fact of her findings.

Another woman would have said, "I am in love with him."

That Barbara Wister could not say because, to her, being in love was no state of infatuation, of blissful attraction, it was a deep, analyzed emotion, based on the understood knowledge between two people of reciprocal mental, physical and spiritual attractions.

Barbara was, in truth, lightly in love. She was infatuated with a fairy prince whose trappings were those with which her imagination and need had endowed him. He was a man with a background of power that lent him glamor in her eyes; he was tender and considerate as Mark had not been; he was flattering in his delight with her. He was, therefore, arrayed in her eyes with glittering attractions. He was the knight in shining armor that she, like a high school girl, was content to adore from afar; he was the movie hero on a silver screen. He was the kind of man she always thought she'd want to be loved by. And because he had found her at the right moment, in a lonely, romantic mood beneath frosty stars, she had let him leave an imprint on her exposed heart that night; let him become an image of her own creating so that in her eyes he was not merely a lonely, middle-aged man.

She had that pretty well straightened out when she finally went to sleep that night. No problem of the future presented itself because she could simply say that she was too busy for golf and tennis. And soon Claire would be coming back. There would be no reason for her to risk the censorship of the town.

She slept well, peacefully, because the sense of danger averted was a sweet one.

Then, less than two weeks later, when she was going to New York for her bi-monthly shopping trip, Pam said, "I haven't a rag for autumn wear. I'm going to New York with you, if I may. You don't have to come back the same day, do you?"

Barbara was busy with her books and she looked up to say, "We can't shop at night, darling."

"I know. But Dad's going to be there and we thought we might make a party of it in New York." Barbara's instinct was to say that she was afraid she couldn't, but when she thought of the distance between South Wintridge and New York, she said she thought it would be fun.

SKILLED MEN

Production of war equipment has reached tremendous proportions. The U.S. Army needs skilled men in the field—thousands of them RIGHT NOW—to keep this huge mass of machinery in first-class fighting condition.

AIR FORCES—We're building the biggest, mightiest Air Force on earth. Thousands of skilled mechanics are needed to keep those great planes flying and fighting. Men with experience as aircraft mechanics, automobile mechanics, radio mechanics, armorers, sheet metal workers, welders and in other allied fields are needed immediately. Aviation has a splendid future and there's no finer training for it than in the Army Air Forces.

ORDNANCE DEPARTMENT—Guns and ammunition are decisive weapons in war, and it takes skilled manpower to keep them shooting fast and straight. Men with experience as automobile, truck and tractor mechanics, armorers, machinists and skilled men of other trades are urgently needed by the Ordnance Department. Technical training in ordnance work is not a requirement.

SIGNAL CORPS—Here, in the "nerve center of the Army," handling the high-speed communications equipment of modern war, there's a big opportunity for men with mechanical talents and training. Licensed radio operators, experienced radio repairmen, telephone and telegraph men—and other able mechanics—will find a thrill in working with the amazing new secret devices of the Signal Corps. Pre-service training is furnished free—with pay—to those who require it.

MEN OF 18 AND 19—Even though you have had no mechanical experience, the Army offers you a special opportunity—the right to choose your own combat branch: Air Force, Armored Force, Cavalry, Coast Artillery, Corps of Engineers, Field Artillery, Infantry or Signal Corps. Or you can qualify as Aviation Cadet. Under 20 you can choose. After 20, this is no longer possible, except for certain skilled specialists.

THIS opportunity to get in now and go places in the Air Forces, Signal Corps or Ordnance Department is open to any skilled specialist between the ages of 18 and 44, inclusive, who is physically fit and does not now occupy a key position in a vital war industry. According to ability, promotions to higher grades and increases in pay may be expected. You've told yourself you'd be ready whenever your country needs you. That time is now! Drop in and talk it over at your nearest Army Recruiting and Induction Station today.

Congress Must Clear Away the Rot

THE CONGRESS AT WASHINGTON needs to do much more than to comply with the executive demand that it take speedy action in coping with the specter of inflation which is now hovering upon us, which, indeed, has already begun to settle upon us.

It must give some serious attention to the methods in which it has been attempting to discharge its vital functions in the present great crisis. It needs to reform existing antiquated methods, and the New York Herald Tribune, examining this need, points out clearly some of the things that should be done.

"The Congress of the United States," it explains, "is one of the three coequal pillars upon which the authors of the constitution erected our system of government. The success of the theory of the division of powers—the theory fundamental to the whole structure—as well as the practical working of the system itself obviously depends upon the efficiency with which each branch utilizes the powers bestowed upon it."

"Much of our political history has been a history of resistances to the attempts of one branch to encroach upon the powers of the other two; and it is undoubtedly true that a three-legged stool cannot stand if one leg swells out of all proportion to the others. But it is also true that it cannot stand if one leg rots away under the pressure of events; and a failure of any branch to do its duty is quite as perilous to the integrity of the whole as is a disposition in any branch to usurp too much authority."

"Again and again the executive branch has been remodeled, expanded and modernized to meet the problems which the times have forced upon us. The judiciary has undergone a somewhat similar process—and though there is still a wide difference of opinion as to the wisdom of the changes, there are few who would argue that the supreme court of 1789 would be adequately equipped for meeting the issues of today. But the Congress stands as the one great anachronism, still following routines laid down in the remote past, still obeying rules, traditions and procedures which obviously bear no relation any longer to the actual issues which confront the nation."

"We are not referring here to the constitutional issue which the president raised by his ill-advised threat. The most glaring defects in the present-day Congress are those which it has itself allowed to grow up by custom or inertia, and which it could quite easily cure by its own action."

"The committee system in its present form is unendurably ponderous and archaic. The power of investigation, which could be one of the most incisive tools of modern government, has been frittered away in reckless, uncontrolled and confidence-destroying headline hunts. Committee appointment by seniority has become a scandal. The utter ineffectiveness, in times like these, of a Reynolds as chairman of Senate Military Affairs, a Walsh as chairman of Senate Naval Affairs, a Fish as ranking minority member of House Foreign Affairs, not only wrecks the efficiency of Congress as a governmental instrument but seriously interferes with its representative function."

"Finally, there is the curious division of labor, sanctioned by hoary rules, which in effect compels the House to vote without argument and frees the Senate to argue without ever coming to a vote, gravely reducing the dignity and effectiveness of both chambers. These are desperate times, which are trying not only the souls of men but the adequacy of their institutions; and there is no doubt that the Congress, living as it has been in outworn habits and rules, has been dangerously losing ground in that trial. Dangerously, because there is no thoughtful citizen who does not want a powerful and competent legislative branch. But if we are to have one, the Congress itself must first of all look within its own heart."

How can that introspection best be brought about? Certainly the existing membership has been long on trial and found wanting. The obvious answer is the injection of new blood and new brains into the weak, vacillating, partisan-minded and timorous membership. That, if anything, ought to give the necessary impetus for bringing about the obvious reforms to which the Herald Tribune so unerringly points.

A Fine Contribution To the War Program

IT REPRESENTED "AMERICA AT ITS BEST" wrote the News reporter who "covered" the scrap metal collection carried out here Sunday.

That was a fitting characterization. People rallied to the call with an impressively patriotic willingness and enthusiasm. In consequence, 251 loads of scrap were collected and that is a splendid contribution to the war program in view of the metals shortage.

The warmest of praise is due all the volunteers who did the principal work in furnishing trucks and manpower for the drive, which was so well organized and directed under the leadership of W. Donald Smith. But others deserve equal praise as citizens generally bent their backs to the task, even the youngsters and the elders who saw opportunity to do something in the war effort that they are by circumstances prevented from doing in active military work. And the spirit of sacrifice was frequently shown in the surrender of silver and other mementoes having both intrinsic and sentimental value to owners.

The people of Cumberland did themselves proud, indeed. But it was to be expected and it only goes to show what can be done when the people know what is wanted and just how they can fulfill a want. Yes, it was a real demonstration of "America at its best." It also demonstrated the value of competent leadership and efficient planning.

What Congress Should Do

WHAT Congress should do, in reply to the demand made upon it by the president respecting needed inflation curbs, is to enact a law providing an overall ceiling for costs.

But Congress appears to be too spineless to do that, albeit it claims credit for having tried to do it in the past only to be thwarted by presidential direction. Therein it again reverted to spinelessness.

Speaker Rayburn and Representative McCormack, majority floor leader of the House, appear to be jamming through a resolution granting the executive authority to exercise the identical powers some of its members have complained President Roosevelt is trying to take away from them.

In other words, that would be just another case of passing the buck back to the White House.

What is needed in this crisis is decisive, all-out action. It should be action through law and not through dictatorial executive decree. We have already had too much government by men in place of government by law.

Yes, It Is Needed Now

A CHARLEY MICHELSON EDITORIAL in the Hagerstown Daily Mail suggests that a G. O. P. Congress is not needed.

Well, considering the notorious buck-passing of the body, its inability to enact a fair and simplified tax measure, the loss of legislative prerogative to pressure groups and other organized lobbyists, the failure to co-ordinate and reduce overgrown governmental functions, the stultifying position into which the body has been placed by executive threat and the Washington mess in general, the admonition is ridiculous.

If ever a G. O. P. Congress was needed to provide a watchful, healthful and effective opposition for the remedy of these and multitudinous other things, it certainly is needed now.

Cheers, we read, is unpopular in the Army camps. Johnny Doughboy, raring to go, has no time for a game that consists solely of watchful waiting.

Whiskers, says a newspaper item, may stage a comeback, but the wise man will hesitate before launching a mustache cup factory.

Osaka, Japan, according to Factographs, has some of the world's most magnificent hotels. But not for long.

Walking, we are told, is the healthiest of exercises. But not between curbstones.

Are "Kids" Framed?

By MARSHALL MASLIN

I was standing right there when the accident happened.

Two cars going in the same direction came together with a crash. One had a front fender dented and a running board broken; the other had a smashed radiator and lights.

A boy was in one car, a skinny kid with a pale face and an impudent nose. A middle-aged man was the other driver; he had a red face and a stick-out jaw.

The man got out of his car and began to give the boy the dickens. He abused him up and down and here and there and told him he had no right to be driving a car. The boy started several times to say something but the older man wouldn't let the boy talk. He was writing down the boy's name and his license number just as a policeman came along.

When the policeman heard all about the accident from the middle-aged man, he too began to scold the kid in the car. The kid, it seemed, didn't have ANY friends. Perhaps he'd been in trouble before. It may have been his father's car he was driving. He knew he was in a jam and he didn't say much. I stood there and took it all in, bawling.

The policeman said something about witnesses. The man saw me standing there and caught my eye. He said to the policeman: "This gentleman can tell you just how it happened."

So the spotlight was on me and I was glad of it. The man with the stick-out jaw had asked me to talk and I was ready.

"It was entirely your fault," I said. "You came down the right side of the street and you made a left turn right in the middle of a business block and didn't even put out your hand. The kid may have been going a trifle too fast, but outside of that he wasn't to blame at all."

The red-faced man began to stutter. The policeman said a few choice words. The kid gulped and grinned and said thanks to me. He hadn't expected a break like that. . . . I hadn't wanted to get mixed up in the squabble, because it might mean going to court and testifying and I didn't want to do that. But what could I do? The boy was getting the worst of it and somebody had to give him a square deal.

But I've wondered many a time since then if a lot of youngsters who get into trouble aren't "framed" in just that way—because an older man complains, because all kids are supposed to be wild and reckless, and because no one was there to throw a little truth into the situation.

Law by FDR Seen Worse for Unions Than Legislation

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14—President Roosevelt made a law last week. It takes effect on October 1 and regulates all "premium and overtime" wage compensation on all work relating to the prosecution of the war.

Usually Congress makes the laws. The constitution says so but Mr. Roosevelt is adopting the view that in wartime he can make certain laws. The other day he asked Congress to pass a law regulating farm prices and said if it wasn't passed by October 1 he would act anyhow. In the case of overtime pay, however, Congress has manifested a desire to act. Bills were introduced two years ago. Committees considered them but the administration squelched all attempts to legislate on the length of the work week or overtime pay.

The issuance of the executive order on overtime pay comes about as a direct result of the President's mistake in not letting Congress legislate. Mr. Roosevelt thought he could handle the matter by co-operation with the heads of the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. They gave him "no-strike" pledges and he worked out a formula for handling overtime and premium pay. He relied on the unions to follow his set of principles. But a big machinists union in the A. F. of L. won an election in a large plant by promising premium pay in violation of the president's formula. Consequently a rival C. I. O. union—the big auto workers organization—passed resolutions indignantly demanding that an executive order be issued by the president putting all premium and overtime pay on a uniform basis or else the C. I. O. union would feel free to strike.

In an embarrassing situation Mr. Roosevelt discovered himself in the embarrassing position of being compelled to find some way to enforce a voluntary agreement entered into between him and the unions. If he ignored the demands by the auto workers, the no-strike pledge might be violated and the justification offered would be his refusal to make all unions toe the mark on overtime pay.

So the president, in order to extricate himself from one dilemma, created another. The labor unions generally cannot be happy about it. For the executive order plainly upsets all existing contracts and the order flatly says these must be set aside if they conflict with the president's stipulation on overtime and premium pay.

It is something new for labor unions to find that by a stroke of the pen, the president of the United States can cancel all labor union contracts made after long and patient processes of collective bargaining. But the unions say they didn't want legislation so now they are getting something worse for them—executive orders.

Up for Two Years It wouldn't be so disturbing if the executive orders were drafted and completed the way laws are made—that is after all interested parties have had a chance for a hearing and for conference with the persons drafting the measure, to say nothing of public debate so that the citizens affected may know what's going on. It is being argued as an excuse that there isn't time to do this in war. The answer is that the problem of overtime and premium pay has now for more than two years been before Congress as a proper subject for legislation by the representatives of the people—both the unorganized and organized workers of America. But the president said in effect "No, I'll handle it"—and Congress abdicated its responsibility.

Now all the difficulties of trying to make more laws and rules growing out of the new executive order will create new problems. This twenty-four hours after the latest order came from the White House, the War Labor Board issued a "directive" denying double-time payment for certain swing shifts even on the "seventh day" which the president had said would permit double-time pay. The board also added a seventh holiday—Washington's birthday—to the president's list of six holidays. Maybe this was just a case of crossed wires. Also it isn't clear yet whether the wage and hour division in the department of Labor or the War Labor Board is to administer and interpret the rules when disputes arise.

Many Hazy Points There are plenty of uninterpreted points. What is or is not "work related to the prosecution of the war?" Who is to decide? What about existing cost-plus contracts and negotiated price contracts? Are they to be reopened to allow for the added costs? The holiday named in the executive order which time and a half can be paid are New Year's day, Fourth of July, Labor day, Thanksgiving day, Christmas day, election day, St. Patrick's day, which holidays are specifically covered by time and a half payments in existing union contracts? Maybe Congress now will decide to legislate after all. Otherwise a dangerous precedent of law-making on wages and hours by the executive alone will be created that may last long after the end of the war.

Does this mean that only "straight time" can be paid now for a forty-hour work week that includes Lincoln's birthday, Washington's birthday, Armistice day, election day, St. Patrick's day, which holidays are specifically covered by time and a half payments in existing union contracts? Maybe Congress now will decide to legislate after all. Otherwise a dangerous precedent of law-making on wages and hours by the executive alone will be created that may last long after the end of the war.

WAR PRODUCTION CHIEF

Benjamin F. Fairless

The United States Steel Corporation, under the leadership of its president, Benjamin F. Fairless, has performed a long and arduous task in the conversion of its activities from peace-time production to production for war.

Chiefly, this has meant stepped-up production at certain plants, for other war plants need steel in various shapes and of varying quality to turn out the finished weapons of war.

United States Steel, however, not only is continuing this activity, but also is engaged in the manufacture of many different types of war supplies, although the list cannot be made a matter of public information.

Benjamin F. Fairless

The federal government may have to regulate and supervise all the timber lands of the United States unless the benefits of conservation practices of the past few decades are to be lost. So much has been written and said regarding metals that the average citizen is unaware of the gigantic lumber industry which is playing in the present crisis.

Recent reports from the department of Commerce show that while unplanned strip cutting has been increasing, the amount of wood needed for essential military and civilian uses is not being produced.

The department of Commerce reports that the lumber stockpile is at a record low figure of 5,335,000,000 board feet. This year's consumption needs about 38,000,000,000 feet, and present indications are that some 37,000,000,000 feet will be harvested. The army, navy, and merchant marine will need 11,000,000,000 feet in 1943.

With prices for all kinds of lumber rising, private woodland owners are tempted to cut their areas closely. Federal and state conservation agencies are justifiably concerned over the situation. Accepted forestry methods will enable timber operators to harvest the necessary crop in the emergency and at the same time assure a crop for the future. Forest owners would do well to consult forestry officials first.

Sweeping Changes in War Management Are Seen Prompted by Rubber Report

By MARK SULLIVAN

The whole rubber story from the beginning is utterly maddening. The only relief in it is the latest development, the report of the Baruch committee, and the apparent promise of early action on the report. But even the Baruch report is only cheering under one condition—in that it inaugurates a sweeping change in the spirit in which our whole management of the war is conducted.

Our deprivation of rubber is as great a disaster in the sheer military sense—as Pearl Harbor. Of the two, the former is the more humiliating. Our disaster at Pearl Harbor was due to sudden surprise by the enemy. Our lack of rubber is due to our own unforgivable negligence, prolonged over many months.

I find myself saying "we" and "our." I think I do this in some vague reluctance to place so tragic a blame on individuals. But it is not a thing that all of us were responsible for. The possibility was on the persons conducting our government.

Go back to the beginning. We knew we were likely to have war with Japan. In August, 1941, President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill talked about it, how soon it would come. Mr. Roosevelt said to Mr. Churchill, "I think I can baby them (the Japanese) along for three months." Three months later, November 26, 1941, we sent a note to Japan, while not formally an ultimatum, had, in the circumstances, the spirit of one. We knew that our note, coupled with the circumstances, was likely to bring war. Our naval vessels in the Pacific were warned that war was likely.

Should Have Been Sure That note was, in the circumstances, called for; it was proper to send some note. But it ought never to have been sent until after we had satisfied ourselves about our rubber supply. We ought to have been absolutely certain of one of two things—either that we could beat Japan quickly, or that we were prepared about rubber. Since we could not be sure of the former, we ought to have made more of the latter. As an absolute necessity, preliminary to war with Japan, we ought either to have accumulated a several years' supply of natural rubber, or to have had synthetic rubber factories ready to operate at the touch of a button. Failure to do either will stand as one of the gravest negligences in history.

Even after December 7, after we were at war with Japan, we still did not act. We ought to have been busy about synthetic rubber on December 8. For weeks we continued negligent. The reason was perhaps the same that had led us into negligence before. We relied upon "maybe." We thought that Japan could not take Malaya from Britain, or the East Indies from the Dutch. That was one of the most disastrous military misjudgments in history. When Japan took both, when Japan had possession of the source of 95 per cent of our rubber, we had to admit the misjudgment.

Finger Pointing and Buck Passing When the appalling condition was realized, there followed a period of finger-pointing, more or less mutual, at and among individuals in the administration. From them, there was attempted shifting of blame to various persons or interests, some outside the country. There were vague charges that some British and Dutch owners of rubber plantations had been unwilling to sell us an ample supply; that other foreign interests were unwilling to see us build up a synthetic rubber industry. It was charged that American corporations were to blame, because of patents they owned, or because of membership they had in international cartels.

As if that sort of excuse mattered. There was but one thing that mattered, really. We ought to have had rubber. To get rubber was the responsibility of the administration. The rubber was not got.

Contradictions Rife Even after the disaster was publicly realized, there was a disposition to minimize it—partly because the magnitude was too great to be readily grasped; partly, perhaps, from natural reluctance to admit so devastating a calamity. Contradictory statements were made about essential figures—how much rubber we had on hand, how much was needed, how much could be reclaimed from old rubber. President Roosevelt at one press conference implied there would be no serious deprivations; at another, said he did not know the facts and was unable to find out.

Not Sound Practice All that consumed the spring and early summer. It ended with passage by Congress of an act, taking the rubber situation out of the hands of the persons whom President Roosevelt had appointed, and setting up another authority. This, President Roosevelt wanted to veto—with some reason, for it was not sound administrative practice. To justify his veto he at the same time set up the Baruch committee, to get the facts and make recommendations.

By that, we were at last on the right track. But that was the first week in August—eight months after Pearl Harbor.

(The quotation of President Roosevelt's words above is from "How War Came," by Messrs. Lindsey and Davis.)

Rayburn Plan Is For Negotiation, Paul Mallon Says

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14—This scrap between Congress and Mr. Roosevelt, over the extent of powers to be granted him to stop farm prices, is popularly called a fight, but comes more accurately under the head of jockeying.

Where Mr. R. stood in his message everyone knows. He wanted power to halt agricultural prices just about where they are, a little ahead for some, but he did not say anything about wages, except that he would stop those in his own way—better than he has so far, no doubt.

Then his congressional manipulator, Speaker Sam Rayburn, announced with one foot on the White House steps, that what the president expected to get was "a broad, general resolution" letting him do about anything he wanted to do.

Rayburn might have hoped to get such a resolution through the House but not through the iron dukes of the farm bloc in the Senate.

Leaders need not pay much attention to detailed objections in the House, when their main purpose cannot be successfully challenged. They just adopted a rule barring any corrective amendments to their proposition, forcing everyone to vote either "yes" or "no."

But they cannot stop either amendments or discussion in the Senate, as Rayburn well knew.

Purely Dictatorial

The proposal he offered was purely dictatorial in nature—another blank check grant of authority to the executive. But as both he and the president knew at the time they could not get it through, any commentator must assume they offered it for the purpose of negotiation.

Mr. Roosevelt seems never to be fearful that someone will call him a dictator. He is not self-conscious on that subject. Often—but generally in indirect ways like this—he has asked for legislative grants which really encouraged anyone to shout dictator at him.

Both he and Rayburn knew this time they were asking for something they could not get, because their own trusted aide, Senator Prentiss Brown, of Michigan, had canvassed the Senate, and was able to tell them.

Brown's warnings, first private and then public, was that any resolution, in order to pass, must contain a specific directive to Mr. Roosevelt to stop wages as well as farm prices—not just leaving it all up to him. Democratic senators Tom Connally and Harry Byrd agreed. Brown's analysis of the Senate situation was correct.

Unless a compromise on this basis was effected beforehand, there was every reason to expect the farm bloc would try to offer some new definition of parity, and further tie Mr. Roosevelt's hands.

Real Fight Likely

A real fight, instead of a sham one like this, would then ensue. Mr. Roosevelt would be forced to act on his own authority, and democratic processes would again be defeated.

The whole fray, therefore, has the character of political maneuvering between Mr. Roosevelt and the farm bloc to get as much out of each other as they can. The compromise is as much as he could expect to get. It is all he will get.

The sham battle also tends to keep out of the debate the fact that Mr. Roosevelt has not acted against inflation with any real strength up to now. While he tried to blame Congress for his failure (and there's everyone knows the facts of the matter too well to even warrant debate on that subject).

The truth is the administration openly opposed anti-inflationary freezing—hard freezing—at the beginning when it should have been done. Its economists said they wanted to get wages and prices up a little, meaning of course, only union wages and farm prices.

Dear friends:
May we explain again our "one-price" system?
"One price" means simply this: The price of the service includes our professional services, the use of our funeral home, the preparation for burial, motor equipment, casket, and all necessary items. Telegrams, railroad transportation and a few other items not always required are extra.

If you desire further information, it is yours for the asking.

storm windows and doors . . .

Save further with insulation and weatherstripping

By conserving . . . you help your pocket-book—and help our war industries in their production rate

Storm windows and doors, properly installed, can cut your heat loss from these two sources by 50 per cent . . . and that saving can amount to 11 to 18 per cent of your total annual fuel bill—often more—depending on exposure to winds and the number and size of windows and doors.

This means that you can often make an undersized heating plant perform satisfactorily by simply insulating your house, protecting it against drafts and cold air. In a time when larger heating plants may be hard to get, this greater efficiency is desirable—besides saving you money and conserving fuel for our war industries.

While there's time, check to see what your nearest contractor or dealer may be able to do for you—whether for storm windows and doors, insulation, or weatherstripping. You'll find it a permanent, worthwhile economy move.

Jeannette Laura Smith Comes Bride of James Raymond Wilson

Mr. and Mrs. Carl F. Smith, Waverly Terrace, announced the marriage of their daughter, Jeannette Laura Smith, to James Raymond Wilson, son of Mrs. Robert C. Aman, 607 Hill Top drive, and the late James R. Wilson.

The wedding was solemnized September 6 in the First Methodist church of Bel Air with the Rev. William J. Wright officiating.

Miss Betty Lee Sommer, Washington, D. C., was maid of honor and Miss Smith's only attendant, Chester R. Wilmont, Air, served as Mr. Wilson's best man.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a length dress of Kelly green, with brown accessories and a corsage of talisman rosebuds and baby's breath. Her maid of honor wore a beige and Kelly green costume with brown accessories and wore a corsage of white rosebuds.

The bride was a member of the year's graduating class of Port E. high school and the Girls High and J. F. F. clubs at the school. She has been employed as a cashier for the telephone company at Aberdeen.

The bridegroom was graduated from Port Hill high school with the class of 1940 and was a member of the football team. He is now employed at the Edgewood Arsenal.

Following the ceremony Mrs. Smith entertained the bride party with a dinner at the Restaurant, Bel Air.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are residing at 604 North Main street, Bel Air. They will arrive here today to visit their parents and to honor guests of Mrs. Ellis B. Kett and Mrs. Ernest Sionas, aunts of the bride, at a mixed luncheon shower to be held Thursday evening at the home of the bride's parents.

Are Warned at All Sailors Not Lonely

BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage—Distributed by KING FEATURES Syndicate, Inc.

More than once I've been convinced hard-hearted because I didn't give the would-be-feminine comforters the addresses of service men, allegedly lonely guys, whose letters appeared in this column.

Now the Ninth Naval District, at Lakes, Ill., warns "well-meaning but misinformed" girls that all sailors are not lonely. The communique was addressed to "unknown Juliet" who have been addressing mail in such general terms as "a sailor with a lonely heart."

Pity Postal Employees

Your Uncle Sam says that he has a department devoted to the registration of sailors with lonely hearts and has neither time nor inclination to go to the trouble of finding out who would like to receive a love letter from some unknown Juliet of unknown age.

The navy department points out that most sailors "contrary to popular belief, have relatives, friends and sweethearts who write them regularly," and winds up the communique by saying, "Girls, have patience on the overworked postal employees."

The warnings from the Navy department gives me a certain feeling of righteousness when I refuse to act as a go-between among correspondents. No introductions, no typing of letters. Some of the girls we try to do in this column the following: Put ourselves in the place of people writing and ask what we'd try to do under the circumstances.

Common-Sense Solution

There is no sob-sister and believe me, controlling our own riparian rights. If there's a common-sense solution, we believe, dig for it. If a problem concerns a man in uniform, we get in touch with the Army and Navy departments in Washington, and get official information.

Now we send our various leaflets, such as who pays for what at weddings; the bride's dress for an annual or formal wedding. Among these are also leaflets on suggestions Anonymous, and suggestions for supper and parties. We also send out budgets until the department of Agriculture began printing bulletins about cooking tips and lungs—but we Americans haven't come to that yet!
We are a variety of other subjects. This column is glad to discuss and introducing lonely hearts is needed not up our alley.

Worried About Sister

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I'm nineteen years old and my problem is my younger sister, twelve, about whom I'm very much worried. She's intelligent and good looking, and appears older than she is. I want her to grow up to be a young lady instead of a roughneck.

When I was her age I never went out, had no friends and didn't learn everything the hard way—my mother never told me anything.

At fifteen I started taking care of other people's children and get a little money to buy clothes for school. I had to wear other people's clothes,

ROMANCE IN "TISH"

Susan Peters and Richard Quine are the young lovers in M-G-M's comedy romance, "Tish," based in part on stories by Mary Roberts Rinehart. Also included in the cast of the film which starts Thursday at the Maryland theater are Marjorie Main, ZaSu Pitts and Aline MacMahon.

I'll never forget what I went through. When I graduated from high school I had to buy everything with my own money except my shoes, which I borrowed.

My sister isn't a bit of help to me. I go out and earn the money to buy clothes for both of us, and when I come home the house is in the same disorder as when I left. I want to teach her to be a good housekeeper. If you have a booklet on bringing up children, perhaps it will help me to train her to be of some use.

WAITING PATIENTLY.

You do not mention having either father or mother. The Children's Bureau of the department of Labor, Washington, D. C., issues a booklet on "Child Management." If you send ten cents to that address they will be glad to forward a copy of the pamphlet. A girl of 12 is too young to know the danger she incurs in running the streets wild and refusing to assume any responsibility.

As you live near New York city you might consult some of the agencies that have to do with child welfare. The pastor of your church might have helpful suggestions, or the Y. W. C. A.

She Is Uncertain

Dear Miss Fairfax:
My girl friend and I have been going steady for three years, during which time we went many places together, and I also visited her at home, where I received a generous welcome.
I love this girl and she has said she loves me.

I've always believed she loved me until recently, when I asked her to marry me. She hesitated and said she didn't want to marry now due to war conditions. She doesn't seem to know what she wants.

Does this mean that she is losing interest in me? I feel my love for her is fading because she seems so indifferent about marriage. Shall I continue seeing her or quit and seek other companionship?

DISAPPOINTED.

Many girls share the same feelings about war conditions as your girl friend. And who can blame them, with so many things to be considered in regard to the future? If you really love this girl, why not agree with her point of view? Besides, you know a woman's reputation about changing her mind. She may say "no" one day and "yes" the next.

Deserted Home

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I've been married twelve years, have the custody of my two little girls of 9 and 11.
My wife left because she says she loves a man who is in the education, but have instructed myself in typing and office practice and would like to get a job in the government.

My parents live several hundred miles from my home and they think I should come home and go to work in their town when my husband leaves. But although they're very dear to me, I do like my home, and my husband says he would like me to be there waiting for him when he returns. Which one do you think I should please?
N. A.

Apply to your postmaster for ap- plication blanks to take a Civil Ser- vice examination in typewriting.

When you have taken the test and passed, they will place you in a position. A high school education is not required, and at present, while there's a great need for typists and stenographers, the requirements are not rigid.

Wife's Defense Job

Dear Miss Fairfax:
My husband is a defense worker on skilled labor. We live in a small town, and were getting along all right on his pay until the cost of living went up.
Now I feel that I'd like to get a defense job also.

However, my husband thinks if I go to work, they will draft him and then I won't have any home. We've been married eight years but have no children.
Would it make any change in my husband's classification if I got a job in a defense plant?
UNCERTAIN.

If your husband is a skilled worker, he will not be removed from his job, nor will his rating be changed whether you take a defense job or not.

Theaters Today

One of Funniest Teams In Hollywood's History

One of the funniest comedy teams in Hollywood's history comes to the Maryland theater commencing Thursday in "Tish," based on Mary Roberts Rinehart's beloved fiction character, with Marjorie Main as the redoubtable spinster Letitia Carberry, aided in laughmaking by ZaSu Pitts and Aline MacMahon.
The three feminine musketeers go through side-splitting adventures ranging from being treed by a tame bear to being arrested by a game warden and spending a night in jail.

Showing for the last times today and tomorrow is Clark Gable and Lana Turner in "Somewhere I'll Find You."

Cagneys Sorry To End Home Life of Cohans

Jimmy Cagney and his sister Jeanne Cagney, said a more or less solemn farewell to a happy home life on the set of "Yankee Doodle Dandy" (now at the Strand theater) at the Warner Brothers studio, where they worked for many weeks.

It wasn't goodbye to the Cagney home life that was the cause of the sincerely serious moment, as Jeanne explained with a trace of tears in her eyes and voice. It was the break-up of the Cohan home, which involved not only her famous brother and herself but also Walter Huston, playing Jimmy's father,
Jerry Cohan, and Rosemary De-

Camp, playing Jimmy's mother, Nellie Cohan.

These, together with Jimmy himself as George M. Cohan and his real sister Jeanne as his real sister, Joie Cohan, made up the tight little Warner Brothers' picture family of Cohans.

As one of these, Jeanne, a sentimental (as are all the Cagneys), regarded the imminent close of the picture and disbandment of the company with very real regret.
Screen family ties, she found, became quite genuine after the many weeks of working together in a picture, and the inevitable break-up becomes almost as sad as though the relationships were of blood and marriage bonds rather than cellu-loid.

Farming Irksome To Hugh Herbert

This business of being a country gentleman is vastly over-rated, take it from Hugh Herbert.

The woo-woo comedian, currently at the Garden theater featured with Olsen and Johnson in "Helizapoppin'," the Mayfair production of the New York stage smash, has nothing but woe-woe being one of the landed gentry.

He is contemplating very seriously throwing up the whole thing and moving back into the city.

For years when he lived in a trunk, playing vaudeville all over the world, he dreamed of one day becoming a movie actor and buying a farm, with some cows and chickens.

A boxing bill broadcast is to come up for MBS handling at 10 o'clock, the origination point Cleveland. On one side of the ring will be Tammy Bauriello, on the other Jimmy Bivens. They are rated as heavyweights.

Students Should Take Books Home, Dr. Myers Says

Prohibitive Orders in Some Schools Termed Handicap to Children

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

In ever so many places all over the United States, the child in the primary grades is not allowed to take his school books home. Sometimes it is by order of a certain teacher, sometimes by a principal or superintendent of schools on the advice of the primary supervisor. In some other cities the Board of Education passes a resolution forbidding the child, especially in the elementary grades, to take home free text books. In a few states it is by order of the legislature.

The reasons most often given by the teacher are that the child will learn wrong reading habits at home; that he will memorize the story at home and read it from rote at school; and, absurdest of all, that he will not be interested in the story at school if he read or had it read to him at home. Then, too, some children might lose or harm the books.

Home Reading Helpful

How could we have useful public libraries if no child or adult were allowed to take a book home? Does not a public library measure its usefulness chiefly in terms of how many books are borrowed for home reading?

One very clear fact grows out of researches in reading—there is no one best way to teach reading.

As for interest, the young child likes best the story he has heard or read over and over again. In case he can read a story from mere memory without connecting the meaning with the words or phrases, see how easy then it is to help him match these words and phrases with their proper meanings.

Stimulate Desire To Learn

Is not the young child's chief motive in learning to read, a wish to read to his baby brother or sister, his playmates or parents? As you know, I have often said in this column that this eagerness to read to some one at home is about the biggest power the teacher in the lower grades has to fire the child with a zeal to learn. And about the best possible way to help the poor reader in the third, fourth or fifth grade is to get him to read to some one at home.

The child from a poor home is handicapped if denied the privilege of taking his school books home. There may be no other book in his home.

Solving Parents Problems

Q. Where may I read something about allowances?
A. I have written a special bulletin on allowances, including a list of books on the subject. You may get it without cost to you by writing me at 235 East Forty-fifth street, New York City, enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it.

TODAY'S VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

By DEAN HALLIDAY

NEW STRAWBERRY PLANTS

Potted strawberry plants may be set out as late as September. In the small garden where there is only space for a limited number of plants the pot method is especially desirable. These plants should bear fairly well next summer.

As shown in the drawing, these potted plants have a good ball of roots and are easy to transplant.

Due to alternate freezing and thawing during the winter months, strawberry plants are frequently partly heaved up out of the soil. To prevent such disaster mulch the plants after the ground has frozen hard. Cover the plants two or three inches deep with a loose material which will not mat down such as marsh hay, salt hay or buckwheat straw, all of which are comparatively weed free.

There are no railroads in Afghanistan. Merchandise is transported on camel or pony back along the seven important trade routes.

NITROGEN goes up in Smoke!

EVERY time a gun is fired, nitrogen goes up in smoke. To keep the guns firing, nitrogen must be conserved on the farm.

One of the best ways of conserving nitrogen is to make better use of farm manure. Three pounds of 20% superphosphate per cow sprinkled on floors and gutters in the dairy barn makes barn manure into a complete fertilizer. Dairymen, with a well-manured rotation, can get along with superphosphate alone, will not need a nitrogen fertilizer.

By laying in both your winter and spring supply of superphosphate now, you can be sure of adequate supplies when you need them. Order your superphosphate requirements now.

SUIT PREFERENCE VITAL. NEXT to the opening lead, which is the most important single play of all in the overwhelming majority of hands, the one ranking second to it is the choice of suit to be led by the defenders to the second trick. The first is more or less "blind," except for whatever inferences may be drawn from the bidding, plus what you see in your own hand, but the second is or should be a more precise matter. Then calculations may be based partly on what you see in the dummy and partly on what your partner plays to the first trick.

East would have succeeded with his double if his partner had paid close attention to all that he saw, and made proper use of it. But he didn't.

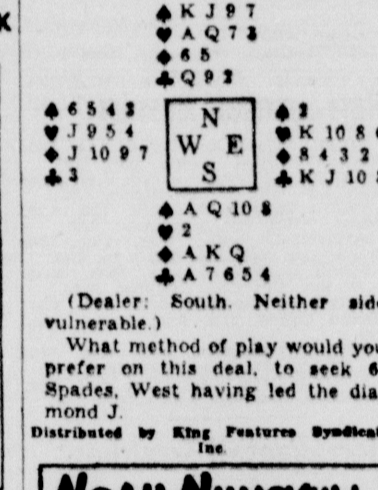

Picking the safest lead of the club K, instead of the suit which his partner bid in response to the uninformative double, as a free bid, but did not rebid, West did not notice the card his partner put on the trick, which was the 2, or else did not derive any message from it. To the second trick, he switched to his partner's suit, the spade K. That and the A won tricks, but the Q scored for declarer on the third round, and the rest of the hand was a pushover for South, by means of trump-dropping and a cross-ruff.

No trick can ever be taken in spades by South unless the opponents lead the suit. West should have read, upon seeing the singleton in dummy and the great number of hearts there, that East knew he would shift to spades or diamonds. There would be no sense in a shift to trumps with so many in dummy. Hence East's job was to signal his preference as between spades and diamonds. That is exactly what he did. His 2 was meant to call for the lower-ranking diamonds, whereas the 7 would have asked for the higher-ranking spades. Had West read the message, a diamond lead would have forced the declarer eventually to break spades himself, and thus take no trick in the suit while losing three, enough to beat his contract.

Airport Runway Black-Topping Job Completed

No. 1 Is Now Ready for Planes; Surplus Asphalt Used on Drainage

Black-topping of the No. 1 runway at the Cumberland Municipal Airport in Wiley Ford, W. Va., was completed yesterday and the 4,300 feet long, 150 feet wide stretch is now ready for planes to take-off and land, Stanley Hillock, WPA engineer, announced last evening.

The project was started by the Cumberland Contracting Company on July 7 and was finished ten weeks later under a number of handicaps, the main one being rainy weather.

At first the contractor experienced trouble obtaining sufficient asphalt and when this matter was finally straightened out one of the rainiest summers in years interfered with the progress of the work. It is estimated that thirty per cent of time was lost due to the weather.

Asphalt for Drainage

Following completion of the runway yesterday, Hillock said that approximately 2,000 gallons of asphalt was left over and this will be used to place a bituminous coat on the drainage ditches.

A total of 6,827 tons of black-top and 45,000 gallons of prime and seal coat asphalt was used on the project. The contract awarded to the Cumberland Contracting Company is approximately $50,000.

The excavation project at the port is rapidly nearing completion and Vecillie and Grogan, Beckley, W. Va., contractors, expects to finish the job in about ten days.

Used as "Race Track" Reports emanating from the airport in recent days are to the effect that the No. 1 runway has been converted into a "race track" by motorists in the early hours of the morning.

While he is opposed to excessive speeds by autos on the blacktopped strip, Hillock said that machines operated at a normal rate of speed will not damage the runway and added "that the more traffic the better as long as they do not cross the drainage."

"Let's hope none of the speeders take-off and go over the hill," the WPA engineer concluded.

1,176 Hunting Licenses Issued Here Yesterday

Seven Clerks at Court House Kept Busy Day before Season Opens

With squirrel season opening today in Allegany county, the clerk of court office at the court house was swamped yesterday by applicants for county and state hunting licenses.

Seven clerks were kept busy all day issuing the permits which totaled 1,176 for the day. This total includes one non-resident license, 199 state licenses and 976 county licenses.

Clerks said that over 3,000 licenses have been issued to date, but could not report an actual number until reports from other sections of the county are submitted. Licenses are also sold in Frostburg, Westernport, Lonaconing and other county towns.

Indications are however that the sale of hunting licenses in the county will equal, if not surpass last year's sale of over 5,600. One clerk estimated yesterday that more women are obtaining licenses this year than in past hunting seasons.

City Officials Get Demonstration On Sewer Cleaning

Consider Purchase of Needed Equipment To Open Clogged Lines

An interesting sewer-cleaning demonstration was started here yesterday and will be completed today by James Maskell, of Irvington, N. J.

Maskell, assisted by a crew from the city's street department, started to work on a section of the old Mill Run sewer on South Centre street. The equipment, largely automatic is constructed in such a manner that a line with a drag or cutting device is drawn through a sewer from one man-hole to another and the dirt, refuse and sand from the pipe lines.

According to Maskell, in his explanation to City Engineer Ralph L. Rizer, the equipment will operate in any size sewer line in the city and will cut through and remove any obstacle that may obstruct the sewer.

Cumberland has long needed equipment of this nature, city officials believe, because there are sewers in the city that have never been completely cleaned and in the years they have been in use they have in many places become badly filled and cluttered with debris.

Manholes and short sections of sewers have been cleaned manually but the equipment being demonstrated here can be operated in long sewer lines up to a thousand feet, which is almost impossible under hand labor conditions.

Maskell said he will complete the cleaning of the section today and then will let the city officials determine for themselves the value of the equipment.

Civic Committee Formed To Plan Honor Roll for Local Servicemen

Will Utilize Records Already Compiled by Junior Association

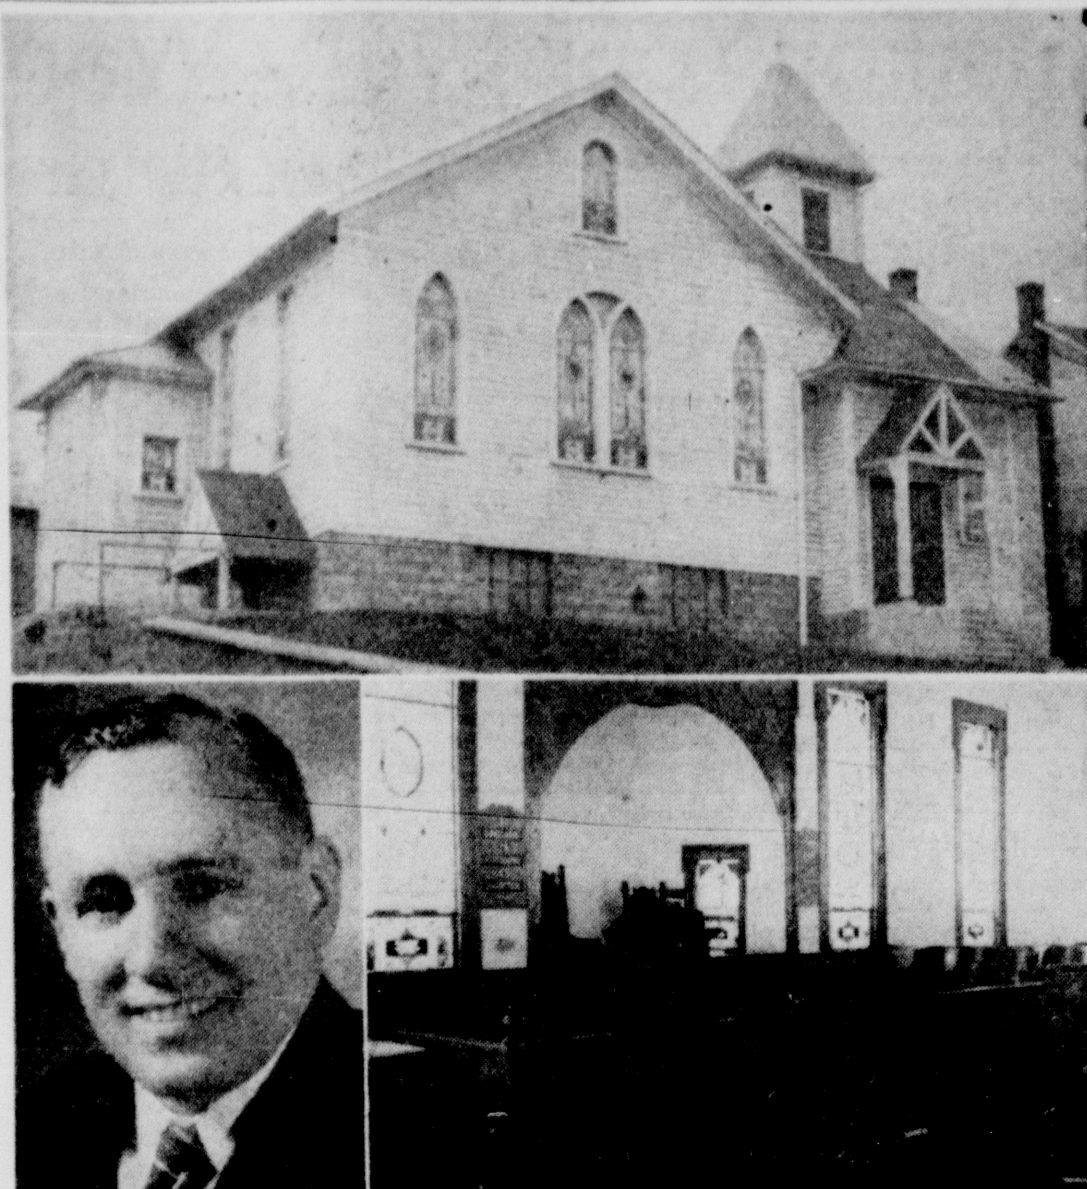

Jack L. Towler, president of the Junior Association of Commerce, was elected permanent chairman of a civic committee to plan a memorial or honor roll for service men from this county, at a meeting last night held in the city hall.

The meeting was called by Mayor Thomas F. Conlon and a number of local patriotic, historical, civic and other organizations were asked to send representatives.

There was much discussion about the purpose of the meeting, the advisability of attempting to set up service records of all men in the armed forces, and whether the committee should undertake to establish an honor roll for men in the city or to include the names of men from all parts of the county.

Honor Roll Proposed

Mayor Conlon proposed that the CENTENNIAL CELEBRATION PLANNED—The centennial of the Eckhart Methodist church will be celebrated commencing Sunday, Sept. 20 and continuing for one week. Plans were recently announced by the Rev. Raymond W. Cooke, pastor who is shown in the above picture with two views of the church. At the top is the front view of the building while at bottom (right) can be seen the sanctuary, pulpit, altar, choir box and some of the pews. Dr. Walter M. Michael, pastor of Centre Street Methodist Church in Cumberland will deliver the sermon at the opening service Sunday at 3 p. m., with Mrs. Elizabeth R. Menefee, judge of the juvenile court here speaking at the young people's service at 6:30. The Rev. Mr. Cooke will preach at the 7:30 p. m. service Sunday.

City To Circulate Information for Handling Garbage

Health Department Plans To Prepare Instructions for Distribution

Cumberland householders will soon receive instructions on the proper manner to handle garbage for collection by city garbage collectors. The mayor and city council, at its regular meeting yesterday authorized the health department to have printed 15,000 copies of instructions for distribution.

Council was asked by Robert B. McCracken, 31 Arch street, in a letter, to provide him with two automobile tires to replace two he claims to have damaged on a city street. McCracken states that his car struck a square pipe on Waverly terrace and broke both tires. The letter was referred to the Police department for investigation.

Water consumption in the city for the week ending Sunday was reported as 66,830,000 gallons compared with 61,750,000 gallons a year ago. The daily average last week was 9,547,000 gallons compared with 8,821,000 gallons daily a year ago. Water in Lake Gordon is two feet below the spillway and in Lake Koon is two feet, seven inches below. Increased consumption of water here is attributed to heavy industrial use, C. J. Bruce, waterworks superintendent said.

Orders passed by the council follow: Payment of $6 to Mrs. Henry C. Dolan, 346 Reservoir avenue, for overpayment of water rent; $6.75 to C. Glenn Watson, 213 Virginia avenue, for overpayment of water rent; $121.87 allowance for James E. Chappell, for Park street paving; $112 to Ralph R. Brotemarkle, 509 Dilley street, auto tax refund.

One Birth Is Reported

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Kinkade, Kitzmiller, announce the birth of a daughter yesterday morning in Allegany hospital.

Plans for Centennial Celebration Completed by Eckhart Congregation

Methodist Church Will Mark Anniversary during Week of Sept. 20

The congregation and pastor of the Eckhart Methodist church have completed plans for celebrating the centennial of the church, commencing Sunday, September 20 and continuing until the following Sunday.

The Rev. Raymond W. Cooke, pastor, announced that the preacher at the opening service, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, will be the Rev. Dr. Walter M. Michael, pastor of Centre Street church, Cumberland. There will be a young people's service on the opening day at 6:30 p. m., with Judge of the Juvenile Court, Elizabeth R. Menefee, Cumberland, as the principal speaker. The evening service at 7:30 o'clock will be conducted by the Rev. Mr. Cooke.

The Eckhart Methodist church was established in September, 1842. The original structure, known as the "Ebenezer church," was followed by a larger structure to accommodate the increasing congregation. It was during the pastorate of the Rev. Charles Oscar Cook, that the congregation purchased the present lot from John Neff and his wife, Harriet. The price charged by the Neffs was $50.

Deed Specifies Use

The trustees of the church at that time as mentioned in the deed, were John W. Porter, Hercules Pierce, Levi R. Fechtig, James Barnard and George Richardson. The deed specifically designated the purposes for which the land might be used.

"Said premises shall be used, kept, maintained and disposed of as a place of divine worship and for the erection of a house for the use of the ministers of said church subject to the discipline, usage, and ministerial appointments of said church as from time to time authorized and declared by the general conference of said church, and the Annual Conference in whose bounds the said premises are situated."

The church and parsonage were erected during the following years and finally dedicated in 1871, during the pastorate of the Rev. H. C. McDaniel.

Improvements were made from time to time, but during the pastorate of the Rev. R. N. Edwards in 1910, the church was practically made over, with radical changes in the design and interior arrangements.

The Rev. Mr. Edwards is still an active member of the Baltimore Conference and is pastor of the church in Washington Grove. His brother, the Rev. John R. Edwards, D.D., is the superintendent of the Washington, West District of the Methodist church, and for many years was one of the secretaries of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Recent Improvements Made

In the recent pastorate of the Rev. Norris A. Lineweaver, the church again underwent a major improvement. The basement was dug out and equipped for modern Sunday school usage, with equipment also for the use of the ladies in preparing meals, and for the young people in putting on plays, socials, etc.

Memorial windows were placed in the sanctuary, new seats were installed in place of the old pews, the altar, interior wood-work, main entrance and hall-way were also done over.

Welfare Board Accepts Four Resignations

Sharp Reduction Noted in WPA Applications; Food Stamps Net $2,688

Resignations of a member of the board and three members of the staff were accepted and statistical reports for the month of August were read yesterday at the regular meeting of the Allegany County Welfare Board in the Welfare building, Cumberland street.

James Smith Resigns James C. Smith, of Little Orleans, a member of the board for the past three years, handed in his resignation, asking to be relieved of his duties because it was difficult to attend regular meetings on account of the tire and gas rationing program.

It was announced that Smith's successor will be appointed by the county commissioners. Three staff members gave notice that they are resigning to accept other employment. They include:

Miss Elizabeth Johnson, of Cumberland, junior case worker, who left last week to accept a position as English teacher in a Virginia high school. Mrs. Mary Manley, of Frostburg, senior stenographer, who will resign September 25 to accept another position. Miss Kathryn Plister, of Cresaptown, junior stenographer, who leaves September 30 to take over a new position in Hagerstown.

WPA Applications Slump The statistical report showed a sharp reduction in the number of applications for jobs on WPA in August compared to the same month last year. Only three applications were received last month while twenty-four were received in August, 1941.

A report on federal food stamp participation for last month when the plan was inaugurated in Allegany county showed that 798 cases representing 2,385 individuals were certified and there were only seventy-eight cases representing 268 individuals participating. Receipts for the purchase of orange food stamps amounted to $1,792 while the value of the free stamps distributed totaled $896.

Car Purchase Approved Approval was given by the State Department of Welfare for the purchase of an office automobile, which will be placed at the disposal of workers, who are now unable to obtain certificates for recapped or new tires.

The report also indicated that the general case load for August is the same as carried a year ago with applications for aid coming in at the same rate. Board members attending the session were Roy W. Eves, chairman, Mrs. J. C. Cobey, C. William Gilchrist, the Rev. Edward P. Heinze and Patrick J. Stakem. Two members of the seven-man board were absent.

THE NAME IS SHROP, AND IT'S A GIRL, BORN AT HOSPITAL

Dr. Theodore R. Shrop, county and city health officer, is passing out the El Ropos these days and the reason:

It's a girl, born Saturday in Memorial hospital.

"It's a fine state of affairs when a proud father picks up two Cumberland papers and discovers that the credit is given to two other persons at a different address," Dr. Shrop declared yesterday.

"Doc" says that the name was spelled S-h-r-o-p-u on the hospital register. Then a Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Shrop, of 512 Rose Hill avenue, were credited with being the father and mother of the little bundle of joy, according to the local newspapers.

The mixup in names caused Dr. Shrop to shout, "It's not Shrop or Shroat but the correct name is spelled S-h-r-o-p-u."

The Shrops used to live at 512 Rose Hill avenue but they now reside at 510 Beall street. The News regrets the error.

Cumberland Properties Are Insured For $8,500,000 against War Damage

Bulk of Protection, However, Is on Large Risks, James B. Reinhart Says

Fifteen agencies of sixty companies have written $8,500,000 worth of insurance against enemy attack in Cumberland since the War Damage Insurance program began July 1. It was announced yesterday by James B. Reinhart, vice-president of the Maryland Association of Insurance Agents, representing the Sixth district.

One agent alone has written five million dollars worth of this type insurance in Cumberland, Reinhart related.

Bulk on Large Risks The bulk of insurance, however, is on large risks such as manufacturing plants, mercantile houses and churches.

"Corporations realize the hazard and are first to take advantage of this insurance," Reinhart said. "A surprisingly low number of small

Gateway Chapter

Post mortems on last Tuesday's primary election:

J. Glenn Beall, who was nominated by the Republicans as candidate for the House of Representatives, not only polled the highest vote of any individual on either ticket, but also was high in a single precinct.

The former state senator's total unofficial vote was 6,559 for the seventy-five precincts. He received 298 of the 340 votes cast in District 12, Frostburg, where he resides.

Seventeen voters in that district failed to cast a vote for either Beall or Henry C. Trieler, his opponent. Three hundred and fifty-seven cast ballots there.

Beall topped Trieler in seventy-four of the precincts and held his Hagerstown rival even in one—that being Orleans, where each man received eight votes.

Frostburg also went for J. Hilary Lancaster, incumbent judge of the orphans court, in a big way.

The well-known band leader, who incidentally led three opponents to the wire in the primary, received 292 votes in District 12 and 264 ballots in District 26, also located in Frostburg.

Charles M. See, blind legislator, seeking re-election to his second term in the Maryland House of Delegates, hasn't lost any of his appeal as a vote getter, judging from the unofficial vote.

The 1942 chairman of the Allegany county delegation led a field of eight GOP candidates to the finish line with 5,347 votes and in doing so paced the opposition in forty-one of the county's seventy-five polling places and tied for first place in four precincts.

Governor Herbert R. O'Connor is the only candidate to lead in every one of the county's precincts. Election board figures indicate that 3,587 out of 3,725 Democrats who went to the polls voted for governor. O'Connor received 3,024 votes, or eighty-two per cent of the ballots cast.

Theodore McKeldin, Republican nominee for governor, lost only two of the county's precincts to W. Pinkney West, Jr. They were Orleans and Flintstone.

A final check-up shows that of the 8,867 Republicans who went to the polls 2,140 failed to vote in the gubernatorial contest. McKeldin received 4,772 votes, or seventy-one per cent of the 6,727 cast.

The best showing made by any candidate of either party for state central committee was Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., local trial magistrate, who led eleven other candidates in a tie for first place in ten other polling places.

Fay W. Keiser, Democratic nominee for sheriff, was out in front of Arthur F. Uhl in fifty-seven of the county's precincts.

Keiser, a boxer of note in bygone days, has some real "fighting" ahead as Allegany county has failed to elect a Democrat as sheriff since way back in 1908—and that's a long time if you ask us.

B. and O. To Start Loading Old Junk This Morning

Baltimore and Ohio railroad workmen will start this morning on the job of loading the scrap collected in Sunday's old metal drive, so the junk can be sent immediately to steel mills. W. Donald Smith, campaign chairman, said last night.

As the scrap is loaded on railroad cars it will be weighed by the railroad company and the local committee will receive $10 per ton for the junk. This money will be divided between the Red Cross and USO.

Smith said last night that the rubber and metal will be separated as the scrap is loaded so the metal can go to steel mills and the rubber to rubber reclamation plants.

The scrap campaign was one of the most successful civic efforts ever attempted here, officials say. Estimates are that more than a million pounds of junk were collected by the volunteers who combed the city in donated trucks for eight hours Sunday afternoon and evening.

At yesterday morning's meeting of the mayor and city council Mayor Thomas F. Conlon and members of the council were liberal in their praise of the work done by the committee, volunteer collectors and the co-operation of householders and residents.

Chief of Police Oscar A. Eyerma has posted a special police detail at the scrap pile to prevent the junk from being carried away by looters.

Fine for Passing Bus Is Suspended A fine of $5 and costs imposed on Harry E. Davis, 26 Marion street, for failing to stop for a school bus was suspended in trial magistrate's court yesterday.

Davis, according to Magistrate Frank A. Perdew, was following the bus when it was driven off the road at a service station in LaVale. Davis, the magistrate said, thought the bus driver was going to purchase gasoline and did not think he was stopping for children.

Trooper Milton G. Hart made the arrest on September 11.

Arrested in LaVale by Trooper Hart for reckless driving George E. Knepp, Sand Patch, Pa., forfeited bond of $15 and costs. Cletus B. Wertz, Bedford, Pa., Route 3, paid a fine of $5 and costs for exceeding thirty miles an hour in a restricted zone. Trooper Hart made the arrest.

George S. Miller, Valley road, arrested earlier yesterday morning in South Cumberland by Lieut. James E. Van and Officer Edwin Lilly, was fined $10 and costs for displaying improper markers. The fine, however, was suspended.

Charles F. McKay, Capitol Heights, forfeited bond of $11.45 for exceeding fifty miles an hour. He was arrested six miles west of Cumberland by Trooper M. Frank Beamer.
